Cub River Canyon Guest Ranch

The Shoshone Indians, while traveling back and forth from their summer hunting grounds in Wyoming to their winter camps near the hot water springs on the Bear River northwest of Preston, would stop and camp here. The Hull family established a 620-acre ranch in the early 1900s and the Murdocks have converted the property to year-round recreation facilities which includes the warm water pool. Since then the resort has been operated by many families and has recently been upgraded. The clubhouse provides changing rooms and lockers plus a café and game room. A zero depth water playground with water toys is popular with children. Two large hydro tubes provide fun for all ages. ### Lava Hot Springs

Lava Hot Springs is a community rich in western history. The abundance of natural resources in the region such as the odor-free mineral hot springs, plentiful wildlife, and water supplies attracted Shoshone-Bannock Indian tribes who welcomed the opportunity to bathe, rest and worship in an area regarded by all as neutral territory. Westward exploration and expansion brought mountain men, trappers, traders, the Oregon Trail and pioneers to the region. The coming of the railroads provided convenient transportation to the general public and Lava Hot Springs developed into a “health and recreation” area. Maple Grove Mineral Hot Springs

In the early 1900s a wood-sided pool was built by the Hopkins family, the original homesteaders of this property. The pool has been updated over the years and is still in use today. The Hopkins allowed people to camp and soak, some people even bought meals at the family table. Unfortunately, at the time white people would not share a pool with Indians so the Hopkins dug another pool for them. Each summer Shoshone-Bannock tribe members came from Fort Hall to fish, hunt and soak.

Best known as Hopkins Hot Springs, but under several different owners, the springs were operated commercially until the 1960s. In 1945 the name was changed to Maple Grove Hot Springs. In 1999 new owners purchased the springs and restored the facilities, including crafting three beautiful stone pools that immediately overlook the Bear River. The current owners continue to improve the site.

This stretch of the river is home to various songbirds, birds of prey, upland and water fowl including Trumpeter Swan, Wild Turkey, Eagle, Osprey, and Pelicans in various seasons.

Location: 11386 N. Oneida Narrows Road, Thatcher, ID (21 miles northeast of Preston, ID or 15 miles south of Grace, ID.) From State Hwy 34, at the bridge over the Bear River, turn east at 13800 N. Road, take an immediate right and travel four miles along the river to the hot springs.
