BEAR RIVER HERITAGE AREA

Blessed by Water, Worked by Hand

Much of the cultural heritage of the Bear River Heritage Area is documented in its small museums, managed by dedicated volunteers and members of the local Daughters of the Utah Pioneers chapter, called a "camp". With a mission to preserve precious artifacts and educate the public, the museums survive on small grants, donations and sales of gifts and books. In some towns, look for historic cabins and other buildings which have been preserved and furnished by the DUP. These sites are usually only open on holidays like July 4th or 24th, but most volunteers are willing to provide a tour by appointment. Space is often limited, but what's inside these museums will pique your interest.
