BEAR RIVER HERITAGE AREA

Blessed by Water, Worked by Hand

In the Bear River Heritage Area (BRHA), ranching and agriculture are still primary occupations that sustain a rich agricultural heritage. Historically, Shoshone Indians hunted plentiful wild game, gathered seeds and berries, and farmed in small amounts. In the 19th century, Mormon settlers developed the Bear River and its tributaries to increase agriculture. Agriculture brought in new cultural groups with their traditions and celebrations, including Japanese-Americans, Latinos/as, Asians and Eastern Europeans. This tour lists some well-established family owned businesses that are known for their quality products and services. More and more people are turning to heritage rich resources such as orchards and small farms, dairies, home gardening and canning—to name a few—and establishing new businesses each year. Look for them as you travel the Bear River Heritage Area.
